Dive into The Well

Clerkenwell London's new drop-in health and beauty destination

Since opening last year, Clerkenwell London has already become one of the capital's principal destinations for design, food, fashion, cocktails, coffee, music, events and exhibitions – and it has just expanded to include wellness too.

Set on the lower floor, The Well is a boutique urban spa dedicated to relaxation, rejuvenation and indulgence. The three treatment rooms and reception eschew the white-box minimalism of many modern spas in favour of a warm, friendly and welcoming atmosphere created in soft and soothing sage tones, birch wood, pebbles, abundant foliage and tropically inspired wallpapers and textiles featuring Clerkenwell London's bespoke print by Charlotte Frances London. It's not just the visuals that create the ambience – Clerkenwell London's own Synesthesia scents add a soothing fragrance to the air.

The Well's team of expert therapists provide a full range of non-invasive beauty and massage treatments, including tanning, waxing, tinting, manicures and technologically innovative therapies such as The Well's signature LED facials – which use NASA-originated research into science of UV-free light therapy to boost collagen production in the skin and energise the body. In keeping with The Well's philosophy of developing wellness from the inside out, each treatment is selected for its efficacy and honesty, delivering proven results that support the natural health and beauty of the body and the skin. There are no 'off-the-shelf' treatments; The Well's therapists ensure every procedure is personalised to the guest's needs, wants and skin type; and everyone, male or female, is catered to with the same sense of warmth and attention to detail.

Run by development manager Rachael Collins, The Well reflects the philosophy of curation applied by Clerkenwell London as whole, hand-selecting brands for their quality not their name. Customers can expect to find industry-leading, results-driven and award-winning brands. Treatments feature masks and serums from pioneering modern US brand Circ-Cell, all-natural botanical products from British brand Bamford, pharmaceutically advanced skincare from Cosmedix, and eco-friendly nail polishes from Kure Bazaar.

'It is the rainforest haven in the centre of the city; you feel as though you have been transported to a completely calm and natural, organic space, surrounded by plants, being enveloped in fresh oxygen and light.'

The Well takes its name from its location. The Clerk's Well was once the eponymous heart of the Clerkenwell community, a gathering place for everyone living in the area (part of it is still visible in Well Court). The Well at Clerkenwell London has a similar aim: to be a modern-day hub, drawing in people from all over the area who are in search of a haven to escape to, whether nipping out on a quick lunch break or lingering for an indulgent afternoon.

Far from the usual look and feel of a 'luxury spa', The Well's ethos revolves around accessibility and authenticity – a space where anyone and everyone can come to experience honest, effective treatments and incorporate wellbeing into their everyday routine.

The Well launches officially on Thursday 1 December, and is open for bookings and drop-in treatments Monday to Saturday each week.
